BRIGHTON TRACK OWNERS INDICTED AS PLAIN GAMBLERS

Charges Against Racing Association, Engeman, Fitzgerald and Cavanagh First Step in Plan to Nail Up the Gates

The Kings County Grand Jury today indicted the Brighton Beach Racing Association, William A. Engeman, Christopher J. Fitzgerald and John G. Cavanagh, for "conducting a gambling house" at the Brighton track.

The indictments are the first steps taken by Acting District Attorney Elder to carry out his threat to close the race tracks. He will take the cases to trial at once, and in the event of a conviction immediately nail up the race track gates, following the rule of the police in taking care of disorderly houses.

Mr. Elder has declared that the race tracks are disorderly resorts, where gambling is permitted. It is likely that a decision will be had in the matter before the horses return to Brighton in two weeks. "It is a peculiar situation," said Mr. Elder. "The race-tracks are protected under the law. But we will put a stop to gambling if we have to arrest and indict every day. If the meeting is for fifteen days we will get a new indictment every day."

It was said today that Joe Vendig and Orlando Jones testified before the Grand Jury that the race-track sold the book makers advance information which enabled them to transact their business. The much-heralded presentment promised by Mr. Elder was handed up by the Grand Jury today. But it was not quite as hot as was expected. The presentment scores the police and track officials for failing to enforce the law and recommends that the present law giving the race tracks permission to police their own grounds and suspending the code be repealed. It comments on the work of Lieuts. Langan and Van Wagner and their assistants, who are attached to the District Attorney's office. Langan and Van Wagner led the raid at Sheepshead which almost caused a riot when they publicly searched the men they arrested. The presentment says: "The evidence laid before us convinced us that notwithstanding the fact that this new law went into force on
